SINGLE MAIT

WHISKY GEININ CAR BARREIS

Third Finest Whisky in the World 2010

Jim Murray's Whisky Bible

Tasting Notes:

Nose: Heavy, thickly oaked and complex; some curious barleysugar notes here shrouded in soft smoke. Big, but seductively gentle, too ..

Taste: The delivery, though controlled at first, is massive! Then more like con-fusion as that smoke on the nose turns into warming, full blown peat, but it far from gets its own way as a vague sherry trifle note (curious, seeing how there are no sherry butts involved) - the custard presumbaly is oaky vanilla harmmers home that barley - fruitiness to make for a bit of a freefor-all; but for extra food measure the flavours develop into a really intense chocolate fudge middle which absolute resonates through thepalate;

Finish: A slight struggle here as the mouthfeel gets a bit puffy here with the dry peat and oak; enough molassed sweetness to see the malt through to a satisfying end, though. Above all the spices, rather than lying down and accepting their fate, rise up and usher this extraordinary whisky to its exit:

Bronze Award winner at Malt Maniacs Awards 2008

Tasting Notes:

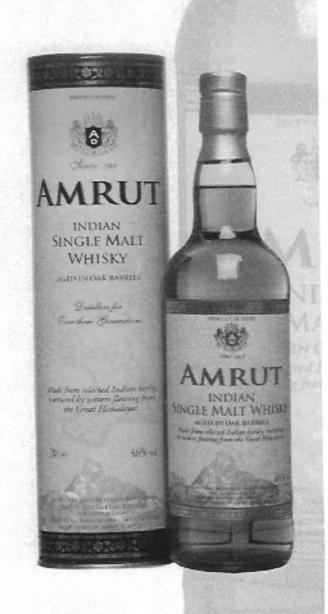

Nose: Distinctly confident liquorice-bourbon notes with near perfect bitter-sweet balance; burnt honeycomb and toffee alsoabound;

Taste: Outstanding richness and sheen to the enormous barley-oak sweetness; again there is a big bourbony cut to the cloth with all the liquorice and molassed sugar normally associated; but the barley adds that extra dimension:

Finish: Long, wonderfully layered oak offering variations of a sweet dry theme; a touch silky with some cream toffee at the death;
